What is Civic Engagement?

Image by Stockcake:
Community Rising Together
(public domain).

Civic engagement means working to make a difference in the civic life of our communities and developing the combination of knowledge, skills, values and motivations to make that difference. It means promoting the quality of life in a community, through both political and non-political processes (Civic Responsibility in Higher Education, Ehrlich, 2000, p.vi).

Operating with unwavering hope, we believe in achieving the seemingly unattainable. “Si se puede” embodies a collective awakening to individual and communal power. Our civic engagement department is dedicated to equipping grassroots leaders with the tools and knowledge essential for guiding their communities toward enduring transformative solutions. We aim to create a Central Valley of informed and engaged citizens and voters ready to advocate, educate, vote, and use our political system to create a more just and equitable Central Valley (Dolores Huerta Foundation website).

The Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), first proposed in 1923, is an amendment to the United States Constitution that guarantees equality of rights under the law for all persons regardless of sex.

As of January 27, 2020, the ERA has satisfied the requirements of Article V of the Constitution for ratification (passage by two-thirds of each house of Congress and approval by three-fourths of the states).

Leading constitutional scholars agree that the ERA is now part of the Constitution. Because of issues raised about its unique ratification process (explained on the Frequently Asked Questions page), the Archivist of the United States has not yet taken the final ministerial step of publishing the ERA in the Federal Register with certification of its ratification as the 28th Amendment.

Current Status of Reproductive Rights

A major challenge to the concept of the ERA is the threat to reproductive rights...

Emma Goldman was an orator and radical political activist who was born on June 27, 1869, in what is now Lithuania. She immigrated to the United States at the age of 16 because her father didn't support education for girls. As an adult, she trained in midwifery and became a vocal proponent of contraception. Teensy problem: it was illegal to publish materials about preventing pregnancy back then! (Bedsider would've been in so much trouble...) So in 1916, after giving lessons to the public on contraceptive use, she was arrested for violating the Comstock Law. Goldman was also an early mentor of Margaret Sanger, the woman who coined the term "birth control" and founded Planned Parenthood. Emma Goldman died May 14, 1940, after a full, colorful life of activism.

Margaret Sanger (September 14, 1879 – September 6, 1966) was an American birth control activist, sex educator, writer, and nurse. She opened the first birth control clinic in the United States, founded Planned Parenthood, and collaborated in the development of the first birth control pill. Sanger is regarded as a founder and leader of the birth control movement.

Gloria Steinem Beyond co-founding the NWPC, Gloria fought for women's right to choose by co-founding Choice USA (now URGE) and Voters for Choice (which later merged with the Planned Parenthood Action Fund). Both groups continue to advocate nationally for reproductive rights and women's bodily autonomy. Their leadership resulted in major successes and events like URGE's annual Abortion Positive Tour, which provides young people the opportunity to discuss abortion openly.

Eleanor Smeal As Co-Founder and President of the Feminist Majority and former President of the National Organization for Women (NOW), Eleanor Smeal has led efforts for the economic, political, and social equality and empowerment of women worldwide for over three decades. She has played a leading role in both national and state campaigns to win women's rights legislation and in a number of landmark state and federal court cases for women's rights. As President of the National Organization for Women, Eleanor Smeal led the drive to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), the largest nationwide grassroots and lobbying campaign in the history of the modern women's movement. The ERA campaign reshaped the contours of women's political participation in the U.S. and demonstrated the strength and breadth of public support for women's rights. Ultimately, the ERA's defeat exposed the entrenched interests opposed to women's equality.

She called for the women's movement, despite much controversy in both the media and the movement itself, to return to the streets in the mid-1980s to dramatize popular support for abortion rights. When many said it could not be done, she led the first national abortion rights march in 1986, drawing more than 100,000 participants to Washington, D.C. She has been in the leadership of every major reproductive rights march ever since, including the 2004 March for Women's Lives, the largest march in our nation's history. Over 1.1 million

Developing Critical Literacy Skills

- In pairs, read two articles.
- Discuss the following questions:
 - What is being reported on in this article?
 - What is the theme of the article?
 - What words or phrases stick out to you as you read?
 - What is the mood or takeaway that the author(s) wants us to have while reading?

- Have students get into partners and read two articles:
 - <https://www.foxnews.com/politics/republican-senators-pro-life-resolution-celebrating-supreme-court-abortion-case>
 - <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2022/jun/24/roe-v-wade-overturned-abortion-summary-supreme-court>

Wagon Wheel Activity

- Get into two circles, one facing in and one facing out so that every student is across from someone
- Listen for questions read aloud
- Students have 2 minutes to discuss the question and then the inner circle will rotate to the right and repeat with a new question, until they get back to their original partner
- Debrief: Spend 3-5 minutes writing your reflection on the questions below. Be prepared to share with the class.
 - How did you feel about the activity?
 - How did this discussion change or affect your understanding of the articles we read?
 - What does this have to do with our understanding of the history of reproductive rights?

Questions for activity:

- Whose voice(s) is/are heard in the text? Whose voices are not heard?
- What does the author think we already know or understand? How do you know?
- What would this text look like if it were written from another perspective? What details would you include and why?
- What did you find challenging about this text? Why?
- What do you already know and believe about the topic of the text? How did this affect your reading of the text?
- What assumptions, beliefs and values does the author bring to the text? What is your evidence?
- What assumptions, beliefs and values does the author make about the reader? What is your evidence?
- Why has the author chosen to convey the claim or theme?
- What questions do you still have about the reading?
- What is the author's purpose? Who is the intended audience? Who is the audience?

Community Engagement: ¡Sí Se Puede!

How can you be involved??

- Research reproductive rights issues and consider ways to participate
 - Boycotting
 - Protesting
 - Calling/writing letters of support to elected officials
 - More!
